

My family has an Ebenezer Stone jar. When God has blessed us or provided for us in some way, we write on a stone and place it in the jar. We just moved it to a large tray on our kitchen table and placed a candle in the middle of the stones. We now light the candle and burn it during family meal times as an extra reminder of how good our God is.

This might be an idea you could suggest to ministers that they could portray to the families in their ministry...perhaps each milestone celebration could offer a stone for families to write the blessing on and put in their own jar at home. How cool it would be if churches displayed such a thing in their sanctuaries for all to see shared church blessings!

Sheri Koyles <Sheri@richmondcumc.com>